

October 23, 2025: On Donald Trump's Disregard for the Rule of Law

Over the course of the last three years, through the invasion of our life by Donald Trump's team of illegal spies and terrorists, a conclusion has become painfully obvious:

Donald Trump

- has no respect for the rule of law and
- only seeks to use the law
 - as a weapon against his perceived opponents and
 - as a tool in favor of his immoral ambitions.

In light of this painfully obvious conclusion, I am writing to symbolically spit on both Donald Trump as a human being, and on his business practices.

The rule of law is the only thing that we have that separates us from the barbarism that Donald so vehemently fights against in his quest to present himself as a worldwide hero.

By disregarding the rule of law in his quest to present himself as a victor over the world's worst problems, Donald has simply lowered himself to become worse than the world's worst offenders.

This strategy is worthy of complete disgust by every law abiding citizen of the world.

Donald's use of the law

- as a weapon against those he opposes, rather than for actual justice, and
- as a shield against accountability for his own crimes, rather than as a shield against injustice, is the exact type of behavior that America was 'founded' to fight against.

Donald's actions have betrayed his carefully groomed persona.

Donald's own choices are showing him to be exactly what is wrong in the world.

For him to believe that he is somehow the savior of America, while embodying the worst qualities in the world, is nothing short of a delusion.

Consequently, let me state very clearly: I spit on you, Donald Trump. Get fucked!
